This feature is a one room prairie school sitting on a poured concrete basement with some concrete block included. Another of those schools I could not get close to. The school is comprised of the main body, entry and a shed addition on the east end. The gable roof of the school and entry are covered with wood shakes over wood sheathing. There is remnants of metal roof cap on the main body and metal capping with a ball finial on the entry. The addition at the back has a shed roof and I couldn't see roofing on that piece. There is a chimney located at the east end of the roof and it is made of red and yellow bricks. The eaves have closed soffits.

The entry is not the width or height of the main body. The shed also seems to be narrower than the school itself.

The siding is 6 inch lap with 4 inch wood corner trim with no paint left. There was a bank of 8 windows on the south side. The windows extended the entire length of the main body of the school. Little to no framing remains in the windows. The door is an open hole at the top of concrete steps.

Looking into the school it appears as if they used wall board but it is hard to tell from that distance. No indication of fuel type used or if there was ever electricity.
