1. Feature Description, Integrity, Eligibility:

This structure, measuring 20' by 32', is located in the city of Carrington. The building is a well kept one-room school with wood lap siding and new asphalt shingles. There is a trim board running along the seam of the roof and walls. The windows are double hung, appear original and are left uncovered. There are three windows on the south and three windows on the north. Two more windows face west with glass in the upper half of the door as well. The glass in the windows appears wavy, perhaps it is the original glass. There is no evidence of a chimney.

The school was built in the NW corner of section 34 of Johnson Township. The lumber was hauled by wagon, through the James River Hills, from Carrington, Comstock and Jordan. Christian Johnson was an educated man and wanted the school built so his children could have the benefit of an education. The school was named after a famous horse.

The school was later moved north to the SW corner of section 23 to more centrally locate the school as more families moved to the area. The school was moved to Carrington in 1992 as a historical landmark of Foster County.

The door could be original and it opens into an entry. The entry walls look like the lap siding on the outside of the building with wainscoating on the lower third of the wall. The historical society has furnished this school with items typical of an early one-room school. There are coat hooks in the entry. The leads into the middle of the entry and there are two doors leading into the main body of the school. The walls of the main body of the school are wood, applied horizontally with wainscoating (vertical strips of wood) along the lower third of the walls. Both the floor and the ceiling are wood with the ceiling painted white. The blackboard is on the east wall.

At some point electricity was added to the school and I do not know when the school closed.
