The feature is a newer school built after a fire. The building measures 48 feet from north to south and 24 feet east to west. I was not able to go inside to see the school interior. The roof of the building has asphalt shingles with a stove pipe near the southeast corner for the furnace. There is also venting for bathrooms. Another pipe extends above the roof of the school at the southeast corner for electrical wires. There are two light fixtures on the wall at the south end, located either side of the entry door. The walls are sided with cedar paneling and there are 4 inch corner trim boards. The soffits are vented and enclosed there is a concrete pad at the entry door. The entry door is locked but has glass on the top 1/2 so I could see inside the entry area. The entry is a hallway into the main room of the school. One door can be seen on the east side of the hallway, most likely the room for the furnace with the location of the chimney outside. There are two doors on the west side with a drinking fountain in the middle. Most likely bathrooms. Looking down the hall into the school I see a blackboard on the north wall. The floor is hardwood. All the windows are covered. This building replaced one that burned down several years ago.
