1. Feature Description, Integrity, Eligibility:

A prairie school with wood lap siding. Small trim pieces of metal the depth of each board are overlapped to protect the corners. It is almost square in shape with taller than normal looking walls. It does not have a separate entry. The door is in the middle of the south side and it a replacement door as it is a piece of plywood. To either side of the door there are horizontal boards inside a frame that might have been windows or perhaps part of a different door arrangement. Above the door and to either side of the center are openings that look to have been windows at one time. An additional dormer piece sits on the roof above the east door with a flagpole on the top. There is a light fixture above the entry door, indicating electricity.

Inside the entry door is a coatroom and the door into the schoolroom as at the south end of the interior wall. The walls and ceilings are of lath and plaster. The ceiling in the entry is about half gone while the ceiling in the schoolroom is intact. There are holes visible in the roof. The floor is narrow wood and buckling in many places. There are 5 windows on the south wall and they are double hung windows, all in a row, with a fixed pane window above each window. It makes for a tall window and I am sure let in lots of light. The windows have wide wood trim boards. Paint lines show were a blackboard was attached to the west wall. The north wall still has blackboards, one attached and another leaning against the wall.
