A one room prairie school sitting on concrete and skids. It was moved from its original location to a farm site to be used for grain storage. The roof has remnants of asphalt shingle over wood shakes. The chimney is gone and the hole sealed up. Eight inch moulding runs under the roof line on either end of the building, under the peak of the roof. There is a metal ridge cap with ball finials topping the peak of the roof. The school measures 18 feet north to south and 22 feet east to west.

The walls are 6 inch wood lap with little paint left. Wood corner trim is 4 inches wide. All the windows have been covered and boards are attached to the north and south walls for anchors and cables to connect to to hold the building together. The west end has wood without seams offset, at one time there was an entry connected to the building at that point. Two doors were added to south side of the building, neither were entry doors for the school. There also two high openings, one at either end of the building, that open for augering grain into the building.

Much of the interior of the building was gutted with the exception of the wainscoating and some of the upper parts of the walls were covered with board lumber. The west wall still has a blackboard. There is no electricity. A wall was built in the middle of the building to make two sections.
