The feature is a one room prairie school on a poured concrete basement. The roof of the school is covered with grey asphalt shingles. There are cornice returns on both of the peak ends of the roof. There is a metal pipe coming out a stub of red brick chimney at the east end of the peak of the roof. The soffits are open. The building measures 30 feet east to west by 20 feet north to south.

A rake board begins the siding under the roof peaks. The remainder of the siding is 6 inch wood lap with galvanized steel corner caps. There is an enclosed stoop at the east end of the building with a concrete porch reached by four concrete steps. There is a gable roof over the stoop, which measures 10 feet east to west by 6 feet north to south. The door to the building is plywood. Inside the school there is an coat room with a door that leads to the south and into the school proper. The walls and ceiling are covered with sheetrock. The windows in the building are a mixture of styles. Two window openings on the east, either side of the stoop, are covered. Windows on the south are fixed pane beside large double hung windows. Most of the glass is still there. A blackboard is hanging on the north wall and the frame for another is on the west wall without the slate. There is wainscot in the big room. Electric light fixtures hang from the ceiling. There are basement windows which are covered up. At the west end of the basement on the south side there is a fuel door.
